

NUR 203 : Pathophysiology I

This course assists students to achieve an understanding of the pathophysiology associated with diminished health states within an individual. Prior knowledge of anatomy and physiology will be integrated into the principles of health alterations related to cellular biology, genetics, musculoskeletal disorders, mechanisms of cellular defense, fluid and electrolytes, digestive, and neurologic function.

Credits 2

Prerequisites

All previously required support courses; sophomore standing in nursing or consent of the faculty.